

Step 2 (no earlier than 12 April 2021)

England

Rallies can commence but as a campsite only; there can be no social activities associated with it, and all members must comply with the Government's guidance regarding social contact, and group size outdoors.

Covid secure protocols must still be adhered to and a Covid Risk Assessment is to be sent to governance@camc.com seven days before the start of the rally.

Step 3 (no earlier than 17 May 2021)

England

There can now be a maximum of 30 people outdoors. This means social activities on a rally can resume but for only a maximum of 30 people.

A Covid Risk Assessment is still required to be submitted to governance seven days before the start of the rally.

The Rule of Six applies to indoor meetings and two households (a van represents one household) are permitted to meet.

Step 4 (no earlier than 21 June 2021)

England

There are no longer any restrictions on social gatherings at rallies.

It is likely that there will still be a requirement to have Covid Risk Protocols in place on rallies and more details of this will be advised at a later date.

All Centre rallies and events must continue to have a Risk Assessment undertaken, per Centre Guidance, and this is to be held on record with the Centre Committee per the GDPR data retention plan. This is good practice to ensure safety on a rally and will be a good reference should anything go wrong.

Reminders to ralliers about handwashing and compliance with any Government regulations are to be followed.

No earlier than 1 April 2021 (Easter Weekend)

Wales

Rallies can commence but as a campsite only; there can be no social activities associated with it.

Covid secure protocols must still be adhered to and a Covid Risk Assessment is to be sent to governance@camc.com seven days before the start of the rally.